To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to express my professional interest in the proposed SECAV-O framework, an open, vendor-agnostic initiative intended to strengthen software engineering practices in the era of AI-assisted development.

I have reviewed the SECAV-O overview materials provided to me, including the description of the problem, proposed objectives, and framework approach. Based on that review and my professional perspective, I agree that the increasing use of AI-assisted software development raises important challenges concerning human validation, review discipline, software quality, and the continued development of engineers' technical competencies.

I consider the SECAV-O proposal to be a thoughtful and technically grounded direction for addressing these challenges. Its proposed connections among engineering activities, work products, competencies, acceptance criteria, observable evidence, AI assistance, and accountable human validation offer a coherent foundation for reusable practices. I also find its practitioner-driven, open-development approach valuable because it creates opportunities for engineers to contribute to the framework's ongoing refinement.

In my opinion, further development and evaluation of this framework would be worthwhile. I would be interested in following its progress and reviewing future technical materials or results as they become available.

This statement is non-binding. It expresses my personal or professional interest only and does not constitute an offer of employment, a commitment to provide funding, a contract for services, a promise of adoption or participation, or an endorsement by any organization unless that organization separately authorizes such a statement. It is intended solely to reflect my assessment of the materials that I actually reviewed.

Sincerely,
